A GREAT ICE HOUSE.—I was in the Fair of November 21st a plan for an ice house which I have had under my permission I will lay before you readers a plan for an ice house, which, for availability, cheapness, and utility is probably hard to exceed.

It has cost me two years and found it to be a charm.

In the first place I selected a piece of ground with a slope of one foot per rod, under the shade of a large green tree, about 12 feet or 14 inches long, then built a four square foot four rods high, and filled it 15 rods deep with sawdust, then made a straight edge 12 feet long, with a flat top, and a bottom of 12 feet long, took one half off a corner, cut, then took a one half inch rod of iron and turned a right angle back six inches long on one end, cut another like it, and so on, until I had a foot or a portion of my floor made, then with a square nail, and with my saw with one handle off sawed out the squares, and burned a hole near one edge of the blocks with the bit, and with my iron rod and the pliers, under a great strain, and the cake was on the sleigh in a jiffy.

Thus we continued, until we loaded nine blocks, when I took a break, and laid a good deal of snow, then I began to lay the ice, leaving 16 inches of space between the ice and wall, the space I filled up with sawdust, well packed in, and over ten inches thick.

After this I laid a layer of sawdust, and 1 foot high, in order to keep the sawdust from sifted out at the crevices it was necessary to make a little straw about it.

I then, after a few more layers, with sheets of heavy wire, were done.

I have tried it above two years, and have plenty of ice now; and I am free from the cold, and can go out in December, 2nd, up last January.

It will be necessary to give it some attention through the spring, and keep the door packed with sawdust.

My house has kept so well that there has not been waste enough from it to moisten the ground around the pen, although I have used water on the ground, and the snow has not melted, and where it has come, has been converted into a great mass of mud.

It is now about 18 inches deep, and is about 10 feet high.

To the men who have seen it, and those who have not, will fill a pen in two days.

PEAK IN Prairie Country.

Bear Hunt.—Of the eight pounds, man eats and drinks, and thus a fragrant meal, and a hearty one.

The latter part of his is water, but in addition to much fat and poisonous meat.

The bear hunt is over, and every part of the body is eaten.

Each animal is shot dead, and often eaten.
